'Dbag' Calgary parkers shamed on social media

Dunce drivers. Yellow lines, handicap logos mean little to some motorists

JEREMY NOLAIS
jeremy.nolais@metronews.ca

One Costco shopper decided a single handicap parking stall wasn't enough for a minivan — and proceeded to take two.

Then there's the red Ford driver who found a plush grassy spot to shut down his or her ride.

Elsewhere, it seems to be a game for big-rig runners to line up their hood ornament with the yellow line intended to divide two stalls.

All of these and many more are what Brian LaBelle would classify as "Dbag" park jobs — and he has full intentions of shaming the folks responsible online.

A certified child and youth counsellor in Edmonton, LaBelle first launched a Twitter account to call attention to poor parking in his hometown earlier this month.

But then he started getting inundated with photos from Calgary as well. It wasn't long before @DBagParkingYYC was born.

"It started out with us just wanting to make fun of people," LaBelle said. "But we've gotten quite a few people telling us, 'I re-parked my car three times today because I was worried about ending up on this website.'

"So, there are people that are changing their habits and paying attention to it out of fear of having their vehicle posted."

Troy McLeod, head of the Calgary Parking Authority, said he's not sure public shaming is a useful tool, unless word of the infraction gets back to the guilty driver. His organization is, however, planning to roll out a new feature with its smartphone app later this year that would allow residents to snap photos of vehicles illegally parked in handicap stalls. Those shots, however, would be used for enforcement purposes, not humiliation, McLeod said.

"Obviously it's to (pass on) the information to the driver in the most effective way we have; that is either a warning notice or an infraction notice," he added.

Complaint filed after misleading United Cabs ads show up online

Taxi feud. New brokerage has drawn drivers from rival Associated, Checker

JEREMY NOLAIS
jeremy.nolais@metronews.ca

Rupinder Gill, president of Calgary United Cabs, is seen during the formal launch of the new brokerage earlier this year. Rival brokers lashed out at United Thursday claiming the company had purchased Google ads, inset, designed to steal business from the longer-running companies. METRO FILE/INSET: SCREENGRAB

Accusations of improper business practices were directed at Calgary's newest cab brokerage Thursday, as misleading ads surfaced online.

The Google advertisements featured the headings of Associated Cab and Checker Cab but the website and phone number included in the postings directed web-surfers to Calgary United Cabs.

Roger Richard, president of Associated Cab, said he marched down to the city's livery headquarters himself Thursday to file a complaint after viewing the ads.

"What kind of B.S. is that?" he asked during an interview with Metro. "They're trying to mislead the people, using our name to fool the people into phoning them, and the bylaw's very clear."

Calgary's livery bylaw does state, "A person shall not make false, misleading, or deceptive statements" in any advertisement, telephone directory listing, pamphlet or other promotional materials.

Associated and United have a heated past, as more than 50 drivers from the more storied company, which began operations in 1978, have jumped to the new offering in recent months. United launched in early 2014 with claims that it features better working conditions for drivers. During the recent Calgary Stampede, president Rupinder Gill pledged that customers phoning for a ride with United would not be met with a busy signal.

Gill himself is a former Associated driver, but was fired after helping organize a series of wildcat cabbie strikes at the Calgary International Airport last year. Metro tested Richard's complaints late Thursday morning by performing basic Google searches for "Associated Cab Calgary" and "Checker Cab Calgary." In both instances, the query returned two paid advertisements above the listing of general websites, one for the legitimate brokerage and one leading customers to United's website.

A second series of Google searches later in the afternoon Thursday returned no results for United, indicating they'd been taken down.

Kurt Enders, Checker's owner, said he too had been made aware of the ads.

"We have informed (livery transport services) and it's presently in the hands of our legal counsel," Enders said. "That's all I can say."

But Gill said early Thursday evening he'd been in contact with the employee who handles United's promotions but had "no idea" how the misleading advertisements came to be. He said the last thing he wanted to do was link his company to his former employer.

Complaint received

A City of Calgary official confirmed receiving a complaint about United's ads Thursday but said no one could speak further to the matter.

Tens of thousands expected to attend Folk Music Festival

35 years of fun.
Festival to feature Jill Barber, Hey Rosetta!, Bruce Cockburn, Amos Lee, HYDRA and many others

JESSICA PATTERSON
calgary@metronews.ca

The 35th Calgary Folk Music Festival kicks off Thursday afternoon at Prince's Island Park, with 76 artists from 16 countries performing over the four-day event.

New this year is the special aboriginal program Great Spirits, which will bring musicians to Calgary from Australia and across North America.

"This year we only have 13 repeat artists — everyone else is brand new to the festival," said Kerry Clark, artistic director of the Calgary Music Folk Festival.

The festival will feature Jill Barber, Hey Rosetta!, Bruce Cockburn, Amos Lee and HYDRA, among others.

Even the 13 artists who've been to the folk festival in previous years will have a different experience this year, Clark said.

"People will get to see them in a different kind of setting and format because they'll be collaborating with other artists they've never met before," she said.

This year's folk festival will also have increased programming, as compared to last year.

"We have increased programming on Thursday afternoon, so we have two stages running, the main stage and the twilight stage," Clark said.

"We have added free programming in Eau Claire during the day."

Founded in 1980, the folk music festival has welcomed locals and visitors alike to Prince's Island Park for family-friendly fun and music from all over the world.

Clark expects attendance to top 53,000 people over the four-day event, with approximately 13,000 people each day.

"It's going to be a fun, sunny weekend with a lot to see and do," she said.

Tickets are still available at the gate for the festival, which runs Thursday through Sunday. Clark said Calgarians can purchase tickets for Thursday night, Friday night and Sunday night.

Police investigate suspicious death outside restaurant

Police examine the scene of a suspicious death outside a northwest Calgary restaurant Thursday morning. ROBSON FLETCHER/METRO

Homicide investigators combed the area around a Humpty's restaurant in the Montgomery neighbourhood Thursday morning, after a body was discovered in front of the building.

Staff Sgt. Jason Bobrowich said both police and EMS responded to the area after receiving a call of a collapsed male in the 1600 block of 46 Street NW around 6:45 a.m.

The man was found on the ground, where he was pronounced dead.

Blood could be seen pooling from the body, lying near the restaurant entrance, covered in a blanket.

A backpack and blanket were lying next to the building just metres from the body, leading some people in the area to believe the victim was homeless or transient.

One man, claiming to be part of the homeless community himself, approached police and wanted to take a closer look at the belongings to see if he could identify the victim.

The area is frequented by transient people, especially at this time of year, according to a resident of the neighbourhood.

"Right now, after the Stampede, we have a lot of leftover transients that were kicked out of the downtown core," said the man, who didn't give his name but said he has lived in the Montgomery area for decades.

Bobrowich said the man appeared to be about 40 to 50 years old and an autopsy is scheduled for Friday morning.

Bobrowich said the death was "deemed as potentially suspicious," but the medical examiner took it a step further and confirmed it as suspicious.

"Therefore our homicide unit has been engaged," Bobrowich said.

'Darrenatics' out in force

The Voice Kids.
Fans spread the gospel as Calgary singing sensation makes reality show final

JEREMY NOLAIS
jeremy.nolais@metronews.ca

Darren Espanto survived a blind audition, a battle round and now he's gearing up for a grand finale.

The 13-year-old Calgary singing sensation, who's repeatedly trended on social media as millions marvel at his big voice and confident dance moves, is among the final four contenders on The Voice Kids, a reality TV sing competition in the Philippines.

Darren left Calgary in early June and has been under a rigorous training regimen since, father Lyndon Espanto told Metro when reached in Manila this week.

The payoff, if he wins, will come in the form of a home, cash prize and, most importantly, a recording contract.

"We really need everyone to come together and vote for Darren," Lyndon said. "He's worked so hard."

As evidence of his online exposure, a video of Darren performing the song Domino during auditions for The Voice Kids has been watched more than 550,000 times. The preteen's fans have been dubbed "Darrenatics" and have been busy garnering support for him from around the world.

Speaking to Metro in early June, the young singer said he hoped to become a star and then use his talents to help the less fortunate.

The youngster has since done the rounds on talk shows in the Philippines and has pledged to hand his winnings over to family and friends in need.

"That's how giving Darren is," Lyndon said. "He always wants to help others. He's been like that all along."

To vote for Darren Espanto, head to entertainment.abs-cbn.com after the grand finale airs Saturday.

City considering flood-mitigating diversion through Fish Creek as another option

In addition to the proposed underground tunnel beneath Heritage Drive, Calgary is also considering another diversion as a flood-mitigation measure, one that would flow through Fish Creek.

Calgary's expert panel on flood mitigation describes "an open channel or tunnel to Fish Creek, diverting water either from the Glenmore Reservoir or the Elbow River before it enters Calgary," as another "diversion option" to consider, in its recent report to council.

"This route would, however, be a longer diversion than the direct tunnel from Glenmore Reservoir to the Bow River, and would heavily impact Fish Creek," the report states.

The advantage, the report adds, is that the "Fish Creek valley within the city has high escarpments providing the possibility of constructing a dry dam that would temporarily contain diverted floodwaters, controlling outflow to the Bow River."

That option would also provide additional water storage capacity, unlike the direct diversion, the panel noted.

A city spokesperson said Thursday the idea is only at a "preliminary feasibility study" stage.

Coun. Brian Pincott, whose Ward 11 encompasses the proposed route of the Heritage Drive tunnel, has heard "some talk" about the Fish Creek diversion but doubts it would work.

"I honestly don't see it as being feasible," he said.

Police, organizers plead for peace at big pro-Palestine rally Friday

City hall demonstration.
Civilian marshals to help manage crowd

As many as 1,500 Palestinian supporters could attend a rally at Calgary city hall Friday, making it a larger gathering than one held exactly one week earlierr that turned violent.

At least three people were injured July 18 when a small group of Israel supporters held a counter-protest near a much larger group organized by Solidarity for Palestinian Human Rights and Justice.

An investigation has been launched into the assaults that occurred and Calgary police Chief Rick Hanson admitted Wednesday that the service "dropped the ball" with a delayed response to violence that broke out.

But police spokesperson Kevin Brookwell said Thursday that units were well aware of plans by Palestinian supporters to turn up again at city hall Friday as violence continued a world away in Gaza.

Brookwell said only a small fraction of people attending the July 18 rally had any intention of stirring trouble.

"It's usually the fringe group that embeds themselves within the legitimate group, and often the legitimate group doesn't even know who these people are," Brookwell said.

He noted that Friday's event was being billed as "peaceful" and "family-friendly."

He said officers will work closely with marshals to pick out anyone acting suspicious or attempting to provoke others.

"I'm optimistic we won't have any trouble," Brookwell said, noting there are 600 to 650 rallies held in Calgary every year.

Ala'a Hamdan is among those who have organized the Palestinian rallies — Friday's event will be the third.

A group of individuals are seen fighting in a still video image captured during a Gaza rally in front of city hall July 18. At least three people were injured in the skirmish. SCREEN GRAB

She said Thursday her group doesn't condone violence during the rallies and fully supports police if they deem charges necessary in relation to the July 18 assaults.

In the wake of the violent clash, the name of the event has been softened and will now be known formally as the "Gaza Peace and Anti-Racism Rally."

Hamdan said a minimum of 50 rally marshals outfitted with neon vests will also be on site to maintain peace and order.

"We're going to be moving up more into the plaza instead of on the sidewalk," she added. "That way we don't have to block traffic or anything."

Charges laid

- Police laid charges Thursday against a man they allege attempted to enter a pro-Israel event at the Calgary Jewish Community Centre with two airsoft handguns.
- Adam Joseph Dykens, 26, faces a host of charges. He remained in police custody and was due to appear in court Friday.

Pilot and plane OK after CF-18 struck by lightning

The pilot of a CF-18 on its way to an air show in northwestern Alberta landed safely Thursday morning after it was struck by lightning.

Whitecourt airport manager William Stewart says the pilot reported the plane's electronics flashed, but that the jet still flew OK.

"He said the electronics did a flash on him and he had a tingling sensation during the strike, but after that, everything seemed to function as it was supposed to," Stewart said.

Airshow

The CF-18 demonstration is one of the performances at the Hometown Heroes air show in Whitecourt. The Canadian Forces Snowbirds and Skyhawks parachute team will also be there.

Stewart said the plane landed without incident and the pilot was fine.

TIRED OF WAITING FOR A CAB THAT NEVER COMES

IN DEFENCE OF Mike Morrison
calgary@metronews.ca

Calgary is a lot of things. It's a great place for families, it's a great place for adventure and it's a great place for business. Well, unless your business is Uber.

Over the last year or so, you've probably heard about Uber's continued efforts to set up shop in Calgary, much like they already have in 150 other cities in 40 different countries. From Halifax to Johannesburg and almost every major city in between, the company has become a way of life for those not looking to rely on only a handful of modes of transportation.

Yet, when it comes to working with Calgary, Uber is now experiencing the migraine that is Calgary's taxi system, a nightmare that the rest of us have been dealing with for more than a decade.

Simply put, Uber is an app that fills the gap that this city's taxis are seemingly refusing to fill. Look, I can't even explain to you the whole situation with this city's cabs; I'm not even sure Mayor Nenshi could. But for some reason, Calgary has yet to figure out the industry that has been around since the early 17th century.

So, here's the thing, city council: I don't care any more.

I don't care about the deals you've struck, the regulations you've put in place and whatever other excuse you've come up with.

I hate to break it to the city council and the livery department, but no one believes that all your regulations exist solely for the safety of Calgarians. Sure, there was a time, we all thought, "OK, they'll figure it out." We were patient. We waited, much like when we're trying to call a taxi company. But now we're tired of waiting.

If these increasing regulations were for our safety, we wouldn't be standing on street corners in the middle of the night, in the middle of winter, waiting for taxis that usually never come.

Your job is to regulate for the purpose of safety, so why does it seem like you're protecting a particular business model instead?

To me, bringing Uber to Calgary can only benefit Calgarians, and that's all that matters.

Since when are we in the business of preventing healthy competition and innovation? And since when is providing as many transportation options as possible a bad thing?

I'm not sure if you've noticed, but it's not always easy to get around the city, especially as the night goes on.

And here's the icing on the Uber fun fact cake: The company, now valued at more than $18 billion, is co-founded by Garrett Camp, a graduate of the University of Calgary.

So the question becomes: If we're not supporting him, who are we supporting?

I think I know.

Worn out

"We were patient. We waited, much like when we're trying to call a taxi company. But now we're tired of waiting."

Inmate repair program. Club celebrates giving away 5,000th bicycle

Three more children will be cruising their neighbourhood on bikes refurbished by offenders at the Calgary Correctional Centre.

On Thursday, the Kiwanis Club of Calgary Chinook celebrated giving away its 5,000th bike since the program's conception.

The program aims to gather bikes and parts, often donated, and give them to children whose families might not be able to afford them on their own.

The Kiwanis Club first teamed up with the Calgary Correctional Centre in 2000. Offenders help repair and reassemble bikes they receive and donate them to the program.

"We found out … (about) a program up at the Calgary Correctional Centre where the inmates learn how to fix bikes," said the program's coordinator, Darlene Kerr. "So we approached them and asked if they would take on our program as well."

One of the newest recipients is 15-year-old Nyayand Pur. She said she had "no idea" where she will ride it first when asked, although she mentioned she will probably use it to get to school.

Body pulled from northeast pond

Emergency responders surrounded a pond near Stoney Trail in northeast Calgary on Thursday after a body was spotted floating in the water.

The Calgary Fire Department's aquatics team was dispatched to retrieve the body, and the Calgary Police Service's homicide unit was called in to investigate.

A person driving by on Aberfoyle Close made the discovery, according to Duty Insp. Joel Matthews with Calgary police.

Officers were treating the death as suspicious, Matthews said.

The deceased is believed to be a man in his late teens or early 20s. An autopsy is scheduled for Friday.

Airport to test self drop-off for luggage

Calgary International. Similar systems have been set up in Halifax, Montreal and Toronto

JEREMY NOLAIS
jeremy.nolais@metronews.ca

Travellers flying out of Calgary could soon drop off their bags and make a beeline to the airport bar without getting stuck in line.

Calgary International Airport has plans to test four self-serve luggage drop-off terminals this fall, according to Paul Lawrence, executive director of terminal integration. If all goes well, the technology could be used more extensively in a new international terminal due to open in 2015.

"As a visitor, basically you'll come up, scan your boarding pass … (and) it will already know that you're checking in one or two or whatever number of bags," Lawrence said. "You'll then put your bag onto the belt on the machine and … (it) will then weigh the bag and check the dimensions of the bag. If everything checks out, then it will send the bag on its way and you'll be free to go."

Similar systems have been unveiled at airports in Montreal and Toronto. On Wednesday, Halifax's Stanfield International Airport became the first in North America to offer an automated luggage drop-off for all its passengers. The full rollout at that airport cost $45 million.

The initial test terminals at Calgary International would be reserved solely for domestic flights through both WestJet and Air Canada, Lawrence said.

He added that the system will only aid those who keep their luggage under the specified weight; overweight items will still have to be checked by an attendant.

Picking up the pace

"It's to allow passengers to use self-service technologies to speed up their experience."

Voting changes will bring end to five-minute Tories

Cut-off date. Voters must become members three days prior to vote

RYAN TUMILTY

People hoping to plunk down their $5 and vote, as has been in the case in previous Progressive Conservative leadership races, will be disappointed in September.

Changes to the voting process, which will take place online this time, mean that potential Tory voters have to join the party before Sept. 3 for the Sept. 6 vote.

Party president Jim McCormick said the cut-off is necessary because of the party's plans for online and telephone voting this time out.

"We need 36 hours to vet and credential the memberships," he said.

McCormick said he is not concerned that voters will have trouble with the changing process.

Leadership hopeful Thomas Lukaszuk said candidates just have to be proactive about signing up people to vote.

"I am making sure that those people who want to support me make those decisions in advance," he said.

Heather Massel, a spokeswoman for Ric McIver's campaign, said the voting changes are an issue for the party to be concerned about, but they are confident things will run smoothly.

"They are the ones who said this is how the rules are this time and it is up to candidates to follow the rules," she said.

Jim Prentice spokesman William Anderson said they actually see an upside, because people will be able to vote more easily, even from the comfort of their own home.

"It's the first opportunity that people are going to have such access to voting," Anderson said.

Candidates will need to get more than 50 per cent on the first ballot on Sept. 6 or there will be a run-off vote held on Sept. 20.

Air Algerie flight crashes in Mali, five Canadians among 116 aboard

Flight 5017. Airplane travelling from Burkina Faso to Algiers vanishes amid 'difficult weather conditions'

A man speaks on a cellphone outside the Spanish Swiftair airline office in Madrid, Thursday. An Air Algerie flight disappeared from radar Thursday over Mali, officials said. The wreckage was found about 50 kilometres from the border of Burkina Faso. PAUL WHITE/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

An Air Algerie jetliner carrying 116 people — including five Canadians — crashed Thursday in a rainstorm over restive Mali, and its wreckage was found near the border of neighbouring Burkina Faso. It was the third major international aviation disaster in a week.

The plane, owned by Spanish company Swiftair and leased by Algeria's flagship carrier, disappeared from radar screens less than an hour after takeoff, en route from Burkina Faso's capital of Ouagadougou to Algiers.

French fighter jets, UN peacekeepers and others hunted for signs of wreckage of the MD-83 plane in the remote region, where separatist violence may hamper an eventual investigation into what happened.

The wreckage was found about 50 kilometres from the border of Burkina Faso near the village of Boulikessi in Mali, a Burkina Faso presidential aide said.

"We sent men with the agreement of the Mali government to the site and they found the wreckage of the plane with the help of the inhabitants of the area," said Gen. Gilbert Diendere, a close aide to Burkina Faso President Blaise Compaore and head of the crisis committee set up to investigate the flight. "They found human remains and the wreckage of the plane totally burnt and scattered," he said.

Prime Minister Stephen Harper issued a statement saying he was saddened at news of the crash, and tweets from the account of Lynne Yelich, Canada's minister of state for foreign affairs, said consular officials are ready to provide assistance.

Radio-Canada reported Thursday that a woman from Sherbrooke, Que., was on board. The CBC's French-language service said Isabelle Prevost's family confirmed the 35-year-old was a passenger.

The network quoted her partner, who was not identified in the report, as saying that their three children were meant to be travelling with her but that it was decided they should stay with him.

Radio-Canada also quoted Burkina Faso native Mamadou Zoungrana, who works at the Papineau Hospital in Gatineau, Que., as saying that his wife and their two sons were on the flight. CBC reported they are not Canadian citizens.

In this June photo, Babar Suleman and son Haris Suleman, 17, stand next to their plane at an airport in Greenwood, Ind., before taking off for an around-the-world flight. On Wednesday, a single-engine plane with two aboard crashed in waters off American Samoa, with a registration number matching the plane flown by the Indiana teen attempting to fly around the world in 30 days. THE INDIANAPOLIS STAR, ROBERT SCHEER

Teen pilot knew risks, says family

Tragedy. Haris Suleman, 17, and his father were flying to Hawaii when their plane crashed

Haris Suleman knew that flying around the world carried risks. But like adventurers before him, the 17-year-old pilot from Indiana also believed dreams aren't achieved without taking chances.

"Why does any explorer undertake the necessary risks in order to accomplish their dream? Because that person has a drive, they have a focus, and they have a need to explore that dream," he wrote in a July 15 blog for The Huffington Post.

That dream turned to tragedy Tuesday when his plane crashed into the Pacific Ocean en route from American Samoa to Honolulu. Crews recovered the young pilot's body but were still searching for 58-year-old Babar Suleman on Wednesday.

As plans for welcome-home celebrations shifted to mourning, family and friends defended the father-son team and their mission, saying they had known the dangers when they set out to break a record while raising money to help build schools in Babar Suleman's native Pakistan.

"It was an absolutely noble cause that they took this journey on, and they knew the dangers," said family friend Azher Khan, who spoke during a news conference Wednesday in Plainfield, Ind., where the Sulemans lived. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

California

Contagious TB patient on loose

Prosecutors in California said Thursday they have obtained an arrest warrant for a tuberculosis patient who is contagious and has refused treatment, putting those around him at risk.

Eduardo Rosas Cruz, a 25-year-old transient, went to a hospital emergency room in March, complaining of a severe cough. Diagnosed with tuberculosis, medical staff told him to stay in a motel room, where a health worker would deliver his medication and watch him take it. But officials say he fled the room. Florida. Tight-lipped cops call prof's death 'murder'

Detectives in the U.S. say Canadian Daniel Markel was shot in the head, but won't say whether he was shot from the front or back. They say he was gunned down at his home in broad daylight, but won't say if he was found inside the house or outside.

Last Friday's shooting of the Florida State University law school professor has stunned friends and colleagues, who demanded to know whether Markel had surprised an armed burglar or robber.

No, police Chief Michael DeLeo said, this was premeditated murder. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Tight-lipped for a reason

Bob Jarvis, a Nova Southeastern University law professor, said there are numerous reasons police withhold crime details from the public. Police are always concerned with false confessions and copycat criminals, he said.

- "It's a way to test anybody who's either making a confession, who's trying to pin the blame on somebody else," Jarvis said. "It's a truth-telling test."

‘Preventing poverty’ unacceptable goal for charity: Feds

Canada Revenue Agency. Forced Oxfam Canada to change its mission statement

The Canada Revenue Agency has told a well-known charity that it can no longer try to prevent poverty around the world, it can only alleviate poverty — because preventing poverty might benefit people who are not already poor.

The bizarre bureaucratic brawl over a mission statement is yet more evidence of deteriorating relations between the Harper government and some parts of Canada’s charitable sector.

The lexical scuffle began when Oxfam Canada filed papers with Industry Canada to renew its non-profit status, as required by Oct. 17 this year under a law passed in 2011.

Ottawa-based Oxfam initially submitted wording that its purpose as a charity is “to prevent and relieve poverty, vulnerability and suffering by improving the conditions of individuals whose lives, livelihood, security or well-being are at risk.”

The international development group, founded in 1963, spends about $32 million each year on humanitarian relief and aid in Africa, Asia, and Central and South America, with a special emphasis on women’s rights.

But the submission to Industry Canada also needed the approval of the charities directorate of the Canada Revenue Agency, and that’s where the trouble began.

Agency officials informed Oxfam that “preventing poverty” was not an acceptable goal.

“Relieving poverty is charitable, but preventing it is not,” the group was warned. “Preventing poverty could mean providing for a class of beneficiaries that are not poor.”

Oxfam Canada’s executive director called the exchange an “absurd conversation.”

“Their interpretation was that preventing poverty may or may not involve poor people,” Robert Fox said in an interview with The Canadian Press.

The Canada Revenue Agency prevailed, and the official declaration to Industry Canada about the purposes of the non-profit corporation dropped any reference to preventing poverty.

“Our mission statement still indicates we’re committed to ending poverty, but our charitable (purposes) do not use the word ‘end’ or ‘prevent’ — they use the word ‘alleviate.’”

Maximum sentence

10 years for man planning to join terror group

The first Canadian convicted under a law criminalizing attempts to join a terrorist group was handed the maximum sentence of 10 years in prison on Thursday, in a case his lawyer had argued was one of entrapment.

An Ontario Superior Court jury had convicted Mohamed Hassan Hersi in May on charges of attempting to participate in the activities of a terrorist group and providing counsel to a person to participate in terrorist activity.

In court in Brampton, Ont., Justice Deena Baltman sentenced Hersi, 28, of Toronto, a one-time security guard, to maximum and consecutive five-year terms for each count, saying he was about to become a “terror tourist.”

Hersi had argued he was the victim of abuse of process, including entrapment, but Baltman dismissed the objection last month and confirmed the conviction — the first since a section of the Criminal Code on attempting to participate in a terrorist group became law in 2001.

Police arrested Hersi in March 2011 at Toronto’s international airport as he waited to board a flight to Cairo via London. They alleged he planned to join Somalia’s al-Shabab, an Islamic terrorist group known for its atrocities. He said he was only planning to study Arabic in Egypt. THE CANADIAN PRESS

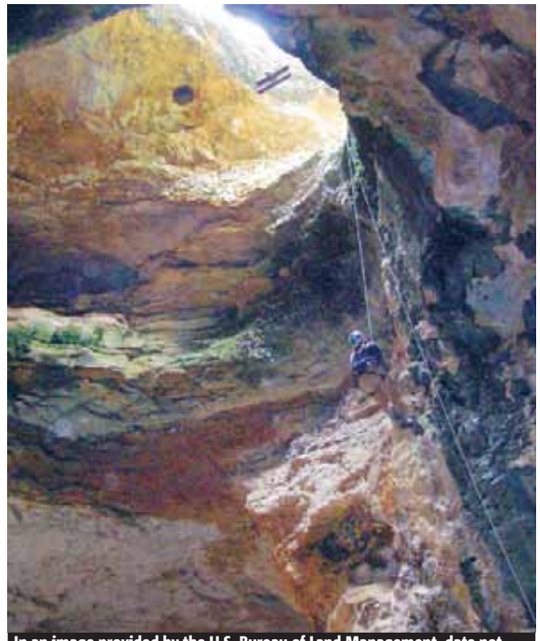
New expedition digs for clues on ancient animals

Remains from the late Pleistocene period.
Scientists to resume work at Natural Trap Cave in Wyoming



In an image provided by the U.S. Bureau of Land Management, date not known, Bureau of Land Management cave specialist Bryan McKenzie rappels into Natural Trap Cave in north-central Wyoming during a cleanup expedition. BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS FILE

For the first time in three decades, paleontologists are about to revisit one of North America's most remarkable troves of ancient fossils: The bones of tens of thousands of animals piled at the bottom of a sinkhole-type cave.

Natural Trap Cave in Wyoming is 25 metres deep and almost impossible to see until you're standing right next to it. Over tens of thousands of years, many, many animals — including now-extinct mammoths, short-faced bears, American lions and American cheetahs — shared the misfortune of not noticing the four-metre-wide opening until they were plunging to their deaths.

Now, the U.S. Bureau of Land Management is preparing to reopen a metal grate over the opening to offer scientists what may be their best look yet at the variety of critters that roamed the foothills of the Bighorn Mountains during the planet's last glacial period around 25,000 years ago.

The remote site is exceptionally well-preserved. It's far too challenging and dangerous to have been trammeled in by casual spelunkers. The Bureau of Land Management installed the grate in the 1970s to keep people and animals out.

A mound of dirt and rock containing layer upon layer of animal bones rises from the floor of the 36-metre-wide, bell-shaped chamber. Meachen hopes the remains are sufficiently preserved in the cold, sheltered environment to contain snippets of genetic information.

Co-investigator Alan Cooper of the Australian Centre for Ancient DNA at the University of Adelaide will attempt to retrieve fragments of mitochondrial DNA from the bones, Meachen said.

Such analysis wasn't possible the last time scientists dug in the cave and could shed light on how the animals were related to their modern counterparts and each other.

"It's so cold all year long that it has got just the perfect conditions for preserving DNA, in multiple species, in large numbers of individuals," Meachen said. "Which is not really found anywhere except Siberia and the Arctic."

Starting Monday, scientists plan to re-explore the cavern, dig and extract as many fossils over a two-week period as possible. The researchers will dig by lights powered by a generator at the surface.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Do it for science!

'Imposing' but important

Paleontologist Julie Meachen said she has been getting ready to lead the international team of a dozen researchers and assistants by hitting the climbing gym.

"I'm pretty terrified," Meachen admitted Wednesday.

She hasn't done any real climbing before, she said, and the only way in is to rappel down. The only way out is an eight-storey, single-rope climb all the way back up.

The cave is perpetually cold and clammy, with temperatures about 5 C and humidity around 98 per cent. Even the Bureau of Land Management paleontologist Brent Breithaupt, who isn't one to fear lots of animal bones, describes the hole as a tad creepy.

"One can only hope that, as a researcher, you're able to leave," said Breithaupt, who visited the cave as a college student the last time it was open to scientists. "It's an imposing hole in the ground. But one that actually has very important scientific value." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

'They are under our homes.' Residents flee Israeli border towns

With deadly fighting raging next door in the Gaza Strip, southern Israeli towns along the border have turned into miniature army bases, as most residents have fled.

Those left behind say they are long inured to near-daily salvos of rocket fire from Gaza but newly discovered tunnels that have been dug by Islamic militants nearby have them spooked.

"It's changed our viewpoint entirely. The rockets we somehow got used to. This is something else. They are under our homes," said Ofra Benudiz, a 52-year-old mother of four in Nir Am, a kibbutz near Sderot. "Our greatest fear is that they will infiltrate."

Earlier this week, 10 Gaza militants dressed in Israeli army uniforms popped out of the ground less than 1.6 kilometres away. They killed four Israeli soldiers before an airstrike killed them, preventing them from moving deeper into the country.

Most of Nir Am's 350 residents had already been relocated to safer areas in central and northern Israel, as happened in two previous wars with Hamas militants in Gaza, kibbutz spokesman Ofer Liberman said.

Malaysian cyclist sports 'Save Gaza' on gloves

A Malaysian cyclist has risked disciplinary action by staging a Gaza protest on the track at the Commonwealth Games velodrome in Glasgow.

Azizulhasni Awang raced on Thursday in the men's sprint wearing gloves with "Save" over one knuckle and "Gaza" over the other. Awang's fists featuring the message were held to cameras after the race, which took him through to the quarterfinals on Friday. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Israel swears in new president

Israel's parliament has sworn in Reuven Rivlin as the country's new president, replacing Nobel Peace laureate Shimon Peres, whose term ends as Israel is fighting a war against Hamas in Gaza.

Rivlin's swear-in ceremony came amid a particularly deadly day in the conflict, which erupted on July 8. So far, over 750 Palestinians, including many civilians, have died in the war. On the Israeli side, 32 soldiers, two civilians and a Thai worker have been killed. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Gaza attack slams UN school, kills at least 15

Wounded include children. It's the 4th time a UN facility has been hit in Gaza since the Israeli operation began on July 8

A UN school in Gaza crowded with hundreds of Palestinians seeking refuge from fierce fighting came under fire Thursday, killing at least 15 civilians and leaving a sad tableau of blood-spattered pillows, blankets and children's clothing scattered in the courtyard.

Palestinian officials blamed Israel for the shelling, which wounded dozens and came on the deadliest day so far of the current round of fighting. However, the Israeli military said the school "was not a target in any way" and raised the possibility the compound was hit by Hamas rockets.

Ominously, meanwhile, violence spread to the West Bank, where thousands of Palestinians protesting the Gaza fighting clashed with Israeli soldiers late Thursday in Qalandia, near the West Bank city of Ramallah. At least one Palestinian was killed and dozens were injured, a Palestinian doctor said.

UN Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon angrily denounced the Gaza attack, saying the killing must "stop now." But the frantic diplomatic efforts spanning the region were running into a brick wall: Israel demands that Hamas stop firing rockets without conditions, while Gaza's Islamic militant rulers insist the seven-year Israeli-Egyptian blockade of the territory must end first.

Violence

The Palestinian Red Crescent said Israeli shells hit the school.

- But Israel's chief military spokesman said the military was investigating and it was too early to know if the deaths were caused by an errant Israeli shell or Hamas fire.
- Fighting was fierce across Gaza on Thursday, and at least 119 Palestinians were killed. That raised the overall Palestinian death toll to at least 803, Gaza health official Ashraf al-Kidra said.
- Israel has lost 32 soldiers, two Israeli civilians and a Thai worker in Israel.

U.S. man claims self-defence in woman's death

Unarmed teen slain. Defendant said didn't know shotgun was loaded when the victim knocked on his door in the middle of the night

Theodore Wafer THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Renisha McBride THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A U.S. man who killed an unarmed young woman on his porch immediately suggested to police it was an accident and that he didn't know his shotgun was loaded, according to recorded remarks played in court Thursday.

Theodore Wafer, 55, is charged with second-degree murder in the death of 19-year-old Renisha McBride, who appeared on his porch a few hours after crashing her car nearby in Detroit.

An autopsy revealed she was extremely drunk.

Wafer's lawyers say he shot McBride in self-defence. Prosecutors say he should have called police if he feared for his safety.

Wafer met officers outside his home after they responded to an emergency call before dawn on Nov. 2.

E-BOOKS CLASS ACTION

To all persons in Canada who purchased E-Books from April 1, 2010 to September 22, 2014
Notice of Certification/Authorization and Proposed Canadian Settlement

THE LAWSUITS
Class action lawsuits were commenced in Ontario, British Columbia and Quebec ("Actions") against Apple Inc. ("Apple") and various publishers of E-Books (the "Publishers", particularized below) alleging they conspired to fix, maintain, increase or control the price of E-Books sold by them in Canada, contrary to Part VI of the Competition Act, the common law and the Civil Code of Quebec (the "Alleged Conspiracy"). The Actions allege that, as a result of the Alleged Conspiracy, the price of E-Books sold in Canada from April 1, 2010 to September 22, 2014 was artificially high, and seek, among other things, reimbursement of the alleged overcharges. The defendants deny those allegations, and the claims have not been proven in Court.

THE PUBLISHERS
The Publishers are Hachette Book Group Canada Ltd, Hachette Book Group Inc., HarperCollins Canada Limited, HarperCollins Publishers LLC, Macmillan Publishers, Inc., Penguin Group (USA) LLC (formerly Penguin Group (USA), INC.), Penguin Canada Books, Inc. and Simon & Schuster Canada, a division of CBS Canada Holdings Co.

THE PROPOSED SETTLEMENT
A settlement was reached with the Publishers (the "Settlement"). Settlement benefits include payment of $3,175,000 (the "Settlement Proceeds") and cooperation in prosecuting the Actions against Apple. The Settlement must be approved by the Ontario and Quebec Courts ("Courts") to be effective.

CERTIFICATION / AUTHORIZATION
For the purposes of implementing the Settlement, the Actions were certified/authorized as class actions by the Courts in relation only to the Publishers. This means that the determinations made in the Actions will automatically apply to all persons who purchased E-Books in Canada between April 1, 2010 and September 22, 2014, unless they take steps to exclude themselves from the Actions (see below under "Your Options"). Certification / authorization will be set aside if the Settlement is not approved by all the Courts.

SETTLEMENT APPROVAL HEARINGS
The requests to approve the Settlement will take place in hearings on October 6, 2014 at 10:00 a.m. in Windsor, Ontario and October 14, 2014 at 9:30 a.m. in Montréal, Quebec. At the same time, the Class Lawyers may seek approval of their contingency agreements with the representative plaintiffs and of a fee percentage to be deducted from the Settlement Proceeds with other court-approved costs.

THE SETTLEMENT AFFECTS YOUR RIGHTS
If the Settlement is approved, it will affect all persons in Canada who purchased E-Books from April 1, 2010 to September 22, 2014 except those who opt out of the Actions, the Defendants and certain related parties ("Settlement Class Members"). Under the Settlement, Settlement Class Members RELEASE the Publishers and other related parties from claims regarding the purchase of E-Books in Canada from April 1, 2010 to September 22, 2014, and commit to discontinue or dismiss other proceedings.

WILL I RECEIVE ANY MONEY AT THIS TIME?
The net Settlement Proceeds (after deduction of legal fees and expenses and any other amounts approved by the Courts) will be held in trust for the benefit of Settlement Class Members. No disbursement of money to Settlement Class Members is contemplated at this time. The manner in which the net Settlement Proceeds will be distributed will be determined by the Courts at a later date, in particular because the case is continuing against Apple and the Courts may be asked to permit their use in the continued prosecution of the Actions. If the Courts approve a distribution of the net Settlement Proceeds, another notice will be provided and posted online at www.Ebooksettlement.ca explaining who is eligible for direct payment and how those persons can apply to receive payment. In the meantime, all purchasers of E-Books in Canada are encouraged to retain proof of purchase of E-Books.

YOUR OPTIONS
If you want to participate in the Actions and benefit from this Settlement and any later settlements or judgments, you do not need to do anything now. All persons in Canada who purchased E-Books from April 1, 2010 to September 22, 2014 are automatically included. You can provide your name and contact information to the Class Lawyers so we can provide further updates on the Actions to you and let you know once the Courts approve a plan to distribute the net Settlement Proceeds.

If you do not want to participate in the Actions, or participate in the Settlement, you must exclude yourself by completing and sending an Opt Out Form to the Class Lawyers by September 22, 2014 (the "Opt Out Deadline"). Opt Out Forms are available at www.Ebooksettlement.ca or from the Class Lawyers. If you opt out, you will keep any right to bring your own lawsuit but will not receive the benefit of this or future settlements or any judgments in the Actions. If you do not opt out of the Actions by the Opt Out Deadline, you will be bound by the Settlement and will not be able to opt out of the Actions in the future.

To comment on or object to the Settlement, you must write to one of the Class Lawyers by September 26, 2014. Comments and objections will be provided to the Courts, but the Courts cannot change the terms of the Settlement.

DO I NEED TO PAY ANYTHING?
You do not need to pay anything out of your pocket. The plaintiffs and petitioners entered into contingency agreements with the Class Lawyers providing for payment of up to 1/3 of amounts recovered in the Actions and reimbursement of disbursements incurred to prosecute the Actions. The Courts will determine the amount to be paid to the Class Lawyers from the Settlement Proceeds.

HOW DO I CONTACT THE CLASS LAWYERS?
To ask questions about the Settlement or Actions, or register as an E-Book purchaser, contact:
- For British Columbia residents: Luciana P. Brasil of Branch MacMaster LLP care of uherlev@branmac.com
- For Quebec residents: Normand Painchaud of Sylvestre Fafard Painchaud care of e.josse@sfpavocats.ca
- For all others: Heather Rumble Peterson of Sutts Strosberg LLP care of ebooks@strosbergco.com

This Notice is a summary. For more information about the Settlement or to read the settlement agreement, please visit www.Ebooksettlement.ca or contact the Class Lawyers.

Rescued false killer whale passes major hurdle on road to recovery

Now bottle feeding.
Calf was found near Tofino on July 10 and was facing respiratory problems, lacerations and wounds

A critically ill false killer whale calf, rescued off a beach on the west coast of Vancouver Island, has overcome one of its most life-threatening challenges.

Staff at the Vancouver Aquarium say the little creature is now nursing from a bottle as it receives around-the-clock care at the aquarium's Marine Mammal Rescue Centre on Vancouver's waterfront.

The bottle was designed by University of British Columbia PhD student Amelia MacRae, who did research for her master's degree with the aquarium, studying diet and feeding levels of marine mammals.

Clint Wright, the aquarium's senior vice-president, used his experience with cetaceans to coax the male calf to nurse.

The whale was estimated at barely six weeks old when it was found near Tofino on July 10, and still requires some feeding by tube.

Veterinarians hope it will continue to improve its bottle-feeding techniques so the tube feeding can be stopped.

They say the calf is also slowly building its strength, buoyancy and co-ordination, but remains in a flotation sling in a shallow pool, with staff constantly walking it in circles through the water.

Malaysian plane tragedy.
More bodies of victims arrive in the Netherlands

Two more military aircraft carrying remains of victims from the Malaysian plane disaster arrived in the Netherlands on Thursday, while Australian and Dutch diplomats joined to promote a plan for a UN team to secure the crash site which has been controlled by pro-Russian rebels.

Human remains continue to be found a full week after the plane went down — underlining concerns about the halting and chaotic recovery effort at the sprawling site spread across farmland in eastern Ukraine. Armed separatists control the area and have hindered access by investigators.

Australian Prime Minister Tony Abbott, who says he fears some remains will never be recovered unless security is tightened, has proposed a multinational force mounted by countries such as Australia, the Netherlands and Malaysia that lost citizens in the disaster. Abbott said Thursday he had dispatched 50 police officers to London to be ready to join any organization which may result.

Details including which countries would contribute and whether officers would be armed and protected by international troops were yet to be agreed, Abbott said.

Railway relaunches women-only cars after rape, killing of 13-year-old girl

Thailand's railway authority said on Thursday it will relaunch women- and children-only carriages in main routes nationwide after a 13-year-old girl was raped and killed in her berth on an overnight train earlier this month.

The State Railway of Thailand said in a statement that the special carriages will start operating on trains travelling to the north, the northeast and the south on Aug. 1.

The move followed public furor over the assault, allegedly carried out by train staff members in early July. One employee was arrested in the rape and murder and a second was arrested as an accomplice.

Pope blesses woman who refused to deny her faith

A 'day of celebration.' Meriam Ibrahim was sentenced to death in Sudan, charged with apostasy for refusing to recant Christianity

Pope Francis meets Meriam Ibrahim, from Sudan, with her daughter Maya in her arms, at the Vatican Thursday. The Sudanese woman, who was sentenced to death in Sudan for refusing to recant her Christian faith, arrived in Italy with her family, including the infant born in prison. Ibrahim was sentenced to death over charges of apostasy. She married her husband, a Christian, in a church ceremony in 2011. L'OSSERVATORE ROMANO/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Pope Francis met privately Thursday with a Sudanese woman who refused to recant her Christian faith in the face of a death sentence, blessing the woman as she cradled her infant daughter born just weeks ago in prison.

The Vatican characterized the visit with Meriam Ibrahim, 27, her husband and their two small children as "very affectionate."

The 30-minute encounter took place just hours after the family landed at Rome's Ciampino airport, accompanied by an Italian diplomat who helped negotiate her release, and welcomed by Italy's premier, who hailed it as a "day of celebration."

Vatican spokesman Rev. Federico Lombardi said the Pope "thanked her for her faith and courage, and she thanked him for his prayer and solidarity." Francis frequently calls attention to the suffering of those persecuted for their religious beliefs.

Lombardi said the presence of "their wonderful small children" added to the affectionate tone of the meeting. Video footage released by the Vatican shows the Pope giving the family papal medals and rosaries.

Ibrahim, whose father was Muslim but whose mother was an Orthodox Christian from Ethiopia, was sentenced to death over charges of apostasy. She married Daniel Wani, a Christian from southern Sudan, in a church ceremony in 2011. As in many Muslim nations, Muslim women in Sudan are prohibited from marrying non-Muslims, though Muslim men can marry outside their faith.

The sentence, issued in May, was condemned by the United States, the United Nations and Amnesty International, among others, and both the United States and Italy — a strong death penalty opponent with long ties to the Horn of Africa region — worked to win her release.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Quoted

"We had the patience to speak to everyone in a friendly way. This paid off in the end."

Lapo Pistelli, an Italian diplomat who accompanied the family from Sudan, said Italy was able to leverage its ties within the region.

Two-hour execution rekindles death penalty debate in U.S.

Arizona. Joseph Rudolph Wood gasped for about 90 minutes during his execution

A transcript of an emergency court hearing reveals that Arizona officials assured a judge during the nearly two-hour execution of a U.S. inmate that he was comatose and not feeling pain at any point.

Joseph Rudolph Wood gasped for about 90 minutes during his execution on Wednesday. The process took so long that his lawyers had time to file an emergency appeal while it continued.

"He has been gasping and snorting for more than an hour," Wood's lawyers wrote, demanding that the courts stop the execution. "He is still alive."

The emergency hearing included a defence lawyer, an attorney for the state and a judge. They discussed Wood's brain activity and heart rate, questioned if he was feeling any pain and talked about whether it would do any good to stop the execution while it was so far along.

"In talking with the director, who has been in consultation with the IV team leader, there has been no appearance of any pain," a lawyer for the state said during the hearing.

Arizona Attorney General Tom Horne's office said Wood, 55, was pronounced dead at 3:49 p.m., one hour and 57 minutes after the execution started.

The third botched execution in six months in the U.S. has rekindled the national debate over the death penalty and given potentially new evidence to those building a case against lethal injection as cruel and unusual punishment.

An Associated Press reporter who witnessed the execution saw Wood started gasping shortly after a sedative and a painkiller were injected into his veins. He gasped more than 600 times over the next hour and a half. During the gasps, his jaw dropped and his chest expanded and contracted.

An administrator checked on Wood a half dozen times. His breathing slowed as a deacon said a prayer while holding a rosary. Wood finally stopped breathing and was pronounced dead 12 minutes later.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Quoted

"Arizona appears to have joined several other states who have been responsible for an entirely preventable horror — a bungled execution."

Are you sick of sickly-sweet vodkas yet?

Good news!
Distilleries have gone sour on over-the-top sweet flavours and are going back to basics

We've had cream-flavoured vodka, candy-flavoured vodka, even breakfast-cereal-flavoured vodka. Now, producers are betting on something different: vodka that tastes like … vodka.

From an Icelandic vodka made from glacier spring water to a Colorado potato vodka made from freshly picked homegrown spuds, the latest vogue in vodka is more craft than kitsch.

"Vodka distilleries are saying, 'Listen, let's get back to our basics. Let's make these products and represent ourselves in a way that holds true to mixing a very clean cocktail,'" says Jeff Leanheart, beverage director of The Smith Lincoln Center in New York City.

Flavoured vodkas have been huge in recent years — bubblegum flavoured martini, anyone? — and Leanheart doesn't expect them to disappear. "There's obviously a niche to any item." But there's a serious spirit emerging in new premium vodkas that mirrors the food world emphasis on fresh, local and seasonal products.

Take Reyka, a new vodka from Iceland that in addition to being made with glacier water, is filtered over Icelandic lava rocks.

The result is a spirit with "a beautiful mouth feel that shows beautifully in simple drinks. It can be drunk almost naked, if you will," says Charlotte Voisey, well-known mixologist and global ambassador for William Grant & Sons, the distillery that makes Reyka. (Other popular Grant brands include Hendrick's gin and Tullamore Dew Irish whiskey.)

Water is a key part of making vodka since the point is to produce a pure spirit, says Leanheart. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CEO apologizes for Chinese subsidiary

Past-due fast food. Shanghai's Husi Food Co. alleged to have repackaged and sold meat past expiration

The chairman of an American meat supplier apologized Thursday for a Chinese subsidiary that is accused of selling expired beef and chicken to restaurants.

Fast food chains in China, including McDonald's and KFC, suspended product use from Shanghai Husi Food Co. following a report stating the company sold meat past its use-by date.

Authorities launched an investigation resulting in five Husi employees being detained. The Xinhua News Agency said Husi quality department manager, Zhang Hui, told investigators "such meat had been produced under tacit approval of the company's senior managers."

"What happened at Husi Shanghai is completely unacceptable," said Sheldon Lavin, chairman and chief executive of OSI Group, which owns Husi Food. "I sincerely apologize to all of our customers in China."

Japan must reinforce its future buildings: report

A U.S. science advisory report suggests Japan must better plan for natural disasters such as those that caused the Fukushima nuclear accident.

A National Academy of Sciences report says disasters such as earthquakes, floods and tsunamis are the kinds of conditions that triggered the world's three major nuclear accidents.

The report says the 2011 Fukushima plant accident, caused by an earthquake and tsunami, should not have been a surprise as it wasn't built to withstand quakes or floods. It also notes another Japanese plant was built to endure both. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

French morning-after pill works for all women: Study

A commonly used morning-after pill is suitable for use by women weighing more than 80 kilograms, the European Medicines Agency said Thursday following a review.

In a statement on Thursday, the EMA said it had assessed all the available evidence and announced the data "are too limited and not robust enough to conclude with certainty" that the pill's efficacy is reduced in heavier women.

Last November, HRA Pharma changed the labels on its Norlevo pill following a study on levonorgestrel, one of the drug's active ingredients.

1 Star Trek Dad. A Vancouver dad is selling his custom 1978 GMC van — a shrine to Star Trek — on eBay. It's airbrushed with stunning imagery from ST, and the interior has diamond-quilted red velvet. Seems the Dad has to "shrink the family vehicle stable" due to "two small boys and no time." Some single dude is bound to scoop it up for his Trekkies, er, treks, across Canada.

2 Spontaneous Combustion, eh? An Edmonton man staying at a relative's house suffered second degree burns to his body after waking up on fire Saturday morning. The man and family witnesses suggest it was a case of spontaneous combustion. The police are investigating, but one thing's for sure: This gives new meaning to the expression, "He's on fire!"

TURD-WORLD PROBLEMS

A guide speaks about a sewer processing system to young visitors wearing hats made to look like feces at an exhibition at the National Museum of Emerging Science and Innovation in Tokyo, on Thursday. Poopyheads get flushed down Toilet!? and break poo taboo

A new exhibit at a Tokyo museum is all about crap.

The "Toilet!? Human Waste & Earth's Future" display at the National Museum of Emerging Science and Innovation (Miraikan) is all about poop, the bathroom throne and the importance of the potty. Children can put on poo-shaped brown hats and slide down a giant toilet slide. You too can become feces!" a sign for the exhibit boasts.

But the potty-themed exhibit has a serious purpose — it calls attention to the startling fact that 2.5 billion people around the world do not have access to clean and sanitary toilets.

Guests are encouraged to learn about different kinds of human excrement, how toilets function in space and the inner-workings of the sewage system.

"People usually look away when it comes to toilets and feces, but you cannot see problems with this kind of attitude," museum staffer Tami Sakamaki told Agence France-Presse. NYDAILYNEWS.COM

Dirty talk

"The idea is to raise consciousness about these problems. Even if they are dirty things, it is important to talk about them openly."

The coast of Newfoundland has been, to use local parlance, "maggoty" with icebergs this summer. And until a glacial Batman started making the rounds online this week, this arched ice island was the biggest celebrity of them all.

Well, brace for bad news, berg fans. The arch, while inarguably lovely, wasn't exactly architecturally sound — a startling lesson learned by Rick and his wife from an uncomfortably close distance. (riickstead/YouTube)

Lucy should stick to thrills

Reel Guys

RICHARD CROUSE AND MARK BRESLIN

Morgan Freeman and Scarlett Johansson star in Lucy, which opens this weekend. CONTRIBUTED

Synopsis

Lucy (Scarlett Johansson) begins the story "just like you: vulnerable, uncertain, frightened of death," but when the bag of drugs some very bad people "slipped into her lower tummy" bursts, her life is changed forever. She doesn't overdose. Instead the drug expands her mind to 10 times the usual capacity. She becomes a turbo-charged human who can change her appearance and move objects with her mind. She contacts a world-famous neuroscientist (Morgan Freeman) to pass along her newfound knowledge, but not before unleashing the power of her mind on the baddies who got her into this mess.

Don't stop the action!

Pseudoscience, dime-store spirituality and Morgan Freeman lectures bog down what could be a fun summer action flick

Richard: Mark, Lucy is a different style of movie, the philosophical action movie. The philosophy is all mumbo-jumbo but that doesn't matter because the film is filled with many enjoyable scenes.

Imagine a mix of Limitless, La Femme Nikita and The Matrix run through Luc Besson's absurd style of moviemaking and you get the idea of what this movie is all about. What did you make of it?

Mark: The movie is great when it remembers it's a thriller but when the pseudoscience and dime-store spirituality takes over, it becomes oppressive.

I always can depend on Besson for brisk pacing but he slows it all down for a series of lectures — literally, with Morgan Freeman narrating his part as seems to be his custom now.

RC: Freeman is one of two top-billed stars in this movie, but his part could have been played by almost anyone. The movie really belongs to Scarlett Johansson, who starts off as a bubbly party girl and ends the movie as the keeper of the secrets of the universe.

It's a bit of a stretch, but if you can wade through the silly scientific theories, there are some great scenes that are more fun than a barrel of neuroscientists.

In one fight scene, all the bad guys have knives and guns while Johansson taps into her inner Jedi Knight to defeat them without raising her hand.

That sequence alone is worth sitting through the entire 80-minute running time.

MB: I liked lots of scenes in the movie, especially at the beginning when Johansson realizes how much trouble she's in.

Afterward she's a bit of an automaton but a very hot one. And what did you think of the trippy psychedelic visuals and time travel revelations toward the end?

RC: You mean the Terrence-Malick-by-way-of-Stanley-Kubrick tribute?

I don't want to give away anything, but with a movie as loopy as this one, I don't think it's a spoiler to say that there is some wild time travel back to the beginning of time.

I guess it's an attempt to add some profundity to the story, but it plays more like a Philosophy 101 student on an acid trip.

MB: Loopy is right, Richard, maybe even crazy.

But at least Besson cribs from the best.

Manimal. Will Ferrell to bring short lived '80s TV series to the big screen

Manimal, the TV series that was cancelled after one season in 1983, is set to be adapted for the silver screen.

Just like Bruce Wayne, Dr. Jonathan Chase is a rich lady's man with a secret: he can change into any animal he wants (he prefers black panthers and hawks).

Two years ago, Sony bought the rights to the series, which hadn't been as successful as expected at the time. Now, however, it could benefit from the surge of popularity animals are currently experiencing on TV and in films.

Will Ferrell and Adam McKay, who have worked together on Anchorman 2, The Other Guys and Step Brothers, will produce the film adaptation.

They will be working with the original series' co-creator, Glen A. Larson (Knight Rider, Magnum), while Jay Martel and Ian Roberts will be in charge of the script. The scriptwriters are currently working on Get Hard starring Ferrell.

The film will feature both real-life footage and animation. No release date has been announced yet.

That lovely instance when two talents collide

A Most Wanted Man. Willem Dafoe recounts working with Philip Seymour Hoffman on what was the final performance of his life

Philip Seymour Hoffman and Willem Dafoe pose with other cast and crew from A Most Wanted Man at the Sundance Film Festival earlier this year. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Willem Dafoe and Philip Seymour Hoffman finally shared the screen in the tense political thriller A Most Wanted Man, a collaboration between two celebrated actors made heavier in gravitas given that it was the final performance of Hoffman's career.

Combined, the pair accumulated one Oscar win and another five nominations. The two actors — mutually gifted with a screen-gripping intensity and a pliable talent that could fit a panoramic variety of roles — had over the years visited one another's stage performances and clearly shared a reciprocal admiration before Hoffman's death of a drug overdose in February.

But as Dafoe does the promotional rounds for A Most Wanted Man, which opens in Canada today, he acknowledged some discomfort in answering questions about his late co-star.

"I don't know what to say ... it's an enormous tragedy that he died," said the thoughtful Dafoe in a recent telephone interview.

"I didn't know him personally that much, although we knew each other's work.

"It's a tragedy. I can't think of someone that's going to fill his shoes. He was very particular and an actor I admired."

He did it for the director

Dafoe's interest in A Most Wanted Man was largely stoked by the presence of director Anton Corbijn, the Dutch auteur who began in photography, veered through music-video direction and finally into feature films. Dafoe knew Corbijn already for his work as a still photographer and then was wowed by Corbijn's Joy Division biopic "Control." And Dafoe says the uncompromising efficacy Corbijn developed as a photographer served him well onset. "He's very clear and strong-willed," Dafoe said. "He's quite intense."

Adapted from a John le Carre novel, the twisty A Most Wanted Man casts Hoffman as the bedraggled head of a secret anti-terrorism team in Hamburg, the city where the 9-11 attacks were planned.

Soon, a young immigrant named Issa Karpov (Grigoriy Dobrygin) materializes in tenuous condition, his body wracked by torture. As it turns out, Issa has claims to a massive inheritance, but can't access it because authorities have classified him as an escaped military jihadist. Rachel McAdams plays a hungry young human-rights lawyer who takes up his cause, while Dafoe is the shifty head of the bank holding his funds.

With a starry cast that also includes Daniel Bruhl and Robin Wright, Hoffman is unquestionably the lead — a hard-living, flinty-eyed political chess-master whose patient approach frustrates local authorities.

And it was, in fact, Hoffman's patience as an actor that stood out to Dafoe.

"When you have a role that's well-drawn and you're the centre of the movie, you can be patient. He knows how to do that," he said. "He didn't push things. He was very present and he really received and became the role."

Super shakeup. Spidey postponement paves way for new Avengers release

Sony's announcement that its Amazing Spider-Man franchise was going to cool off led Marvel to snap up the vacated May 4, 2018 for itself — and perhaps The Avengers 3.

Bumping The Amazing Spider-Man 3 from June 2016 to sometime in 2018 leaves Sony's other superpowered piece, The Sinister Six, better room to breathe come November 11, 2016.

In response to Marvel's extensive multi-year superhero crossover, Fox's rejuvenated X-Men universe, and Warner Bros.' path towards Batman v. Superman, The Sinister Six instead sides with a clutch of supervillains, as written and directed by Drew Goddard of Cloverfield, The Cabin in the Woods and World War Z.

And though The Amazing Spider-Man 3 made good bank at over $700 million on a $200-million budget since April, the webslinger's box office pull has been declining since Sam Raimi closed the Spider-Man trilogy in 2007.

Responding almost immediately to the July 23 rescheduling was Marvel, already beefing up for a head-on collision between Batman v. Superman and its own Captain America 3 on May 6, 2016.

Having recently projected release dates for five new Marvel movies between July 2017 and May 2019, Marvel moved to announce its intentions for May 4, 2018, in the absence of The Amazing Spider-Man 4.

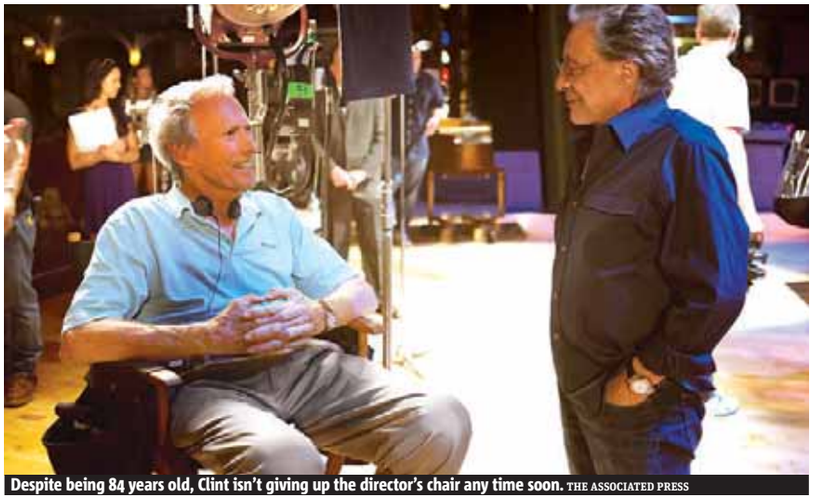
"The timing would be right for Avengers 3," noted The Hollywood Reporter, observing a similar three-year gap between the first Avengers released in May 2012 and the second, Avengers: Age of Ultron, which is being prepared for May 2015.

AFP

As the Spider-Man franchise takes a breather until 2018, Marvel has stepped up to nab the May 4, 2018 release date, possibly for Avengers 3? AFP

These directors are refusing to say 'cut'

Working in the twilight. Eastwood and Allen are just two filmmakers still putting out work late in life



Despite being 84 years old, Clint isn't giving up the director's chair any time soon. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Visiting a retired Frank Capra at his Sierra Nevada hideaway, Clint Eastwood was baffled.

"I always thought: He could be making a film right now. He's as lucid as could be. Here's the great Frank Capra not doing it,"' Eastwood recalled of the famed director, who died in 1991 at 94, three decades after his last film. "I always thought, 'I wonder why that is?"'

Eastwood, who at 84 just released the musical Jersey Boys and wrapped shooting on the Navy SEAL drama American Sniper, isn't the only filmmaker blowing past conventional retirement age. This Friday, Woody Allen, 78, will, like clockwork, release his latest, the French Riviera romantic comedy Magic in the Moonlight. He's also already on to the next one, shooting in Rhode Island this summer.

In June came Venus in Fur, from 80-year-old Roman Polanski. And in May, 83-year-old Jean-Luc Godard, the perpetual enfant terrible, premiered his 3D Goodbye to Language at the Cannes Film Festival.

Both European iconoclasts remain as mischievous in old age as Allen and Eastwood have been steadfast. Polanski's film is a gloriously comic, self-referential gender play. Godard's film — in which his dog played a starring role — was more experimental than most 25-year-old's would dare. It was greeted in Cannes by an audience member's cry: "Godard forever!"

At a time when literary giants like Philip Roth, 81, and Alice Munro, 83, have quit their craft, many of cinema's auteurs have stubbornly persisted, while at the same time churning out frequently acclaimed, often vibrant films in a youth-driven industry.

"In Hollywood there is that kind of hackneyed, commercial thinking where they think, 'Oh, this guy is over the hill, this guy can't direct that kind of picture,"' says Allen. "But the truth of the matter is that in my lifetime, there have been many directors like John Ford, John Huston, Billy Wilder who were wonderful as they got older and they made sometimes better pictures than they made when they were younger."

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Long-lived directors

Film history is littered with directors who worked well past retirement age. Akira Kurosawa, Sidney Lumet and Robert Altman all worked into their 80s, producing fine films: Altman's Gosford Park, Kurosawa's Dreams, Lumet's Before the Devil Knows You're Dead.

Rob Reiner. Man behind When Harry Met Sally looks at aging in new film

Rob Reiner THE CANADIAN PRESS

As Rob Reiner's film And So It Goes hits theatres on Friday, he regards When Harry Met Sally as one of the most memorable experiences of his esteemed directorial career.

For one, he met his wife, photographer Michele Singer, on the set of the Oscar-nominated romantic comedy that came out 25 years ago.

Then there was the unique experience of showing star Meg Ryan how to do that famous scene in which she pretends to have an orgasm opposite Billy Crystal in a diner.

"She was a little nervous doing it in front of the crew and all the extras and everybody, and the first time she did it, it was a little bit kind of tepid and then I said, 'Come on, Meg, you've got to do it with a little bit more,"' Reiner recalled in a recent telephone interview.

"And she did it and again, it was not so strong, and then I said, 'Hey, look, let me show you what I want,' and I sat down opposite Billy and I started pounding the table and going 'Yes, yes!' and doing all this stuff.

"He said it looked like he was having a date with Sebastian Cabot or somebody like that, and then I realized that I'm having an orgasm in front of my mother. My mother was sitting right over there and it was a little embarrassing." (Reiner's mother, Estelle, played the nearby patron who declares after the orgasm display: "I'll have what she's having.")

And So It Goes stars Michael Douglas and Diane Keaton (who had never starred opposite each other before) as neighbours in an apartment complex.

Reiner has had a varied career with a long list of directorial efforts in many genres, including Misery and the Oscar-nominated A Few Good Men and Stand By Me.

But ever since he helmed 2007's The Bucket List starring Jack Nicholson and Morgan Freeman as terminally ill men, he found himself wanting to do a specific type of story — one that reflects the experiences of "people of a certain age," including himself.

Books to get you through any crisis

Virtually every aspect of your life changes in your 20s and 30s. Jobs, apartments, romantic partners and friend groups inevitably change over and over again. It's exhausting. To help ease the stress, we rounded up four books to help you through whatever crisis you're currently going through.

EMILY LAURENCE METRO WORLD NEWS IN NEW YORK

For the quarter-life crisis

The 20-something Guide To Getting It Together, by Mary Traina

If you find yourself relating a little bit too much to Girls, pick up this book. It will help you gain more control of your life by helping you figure out who to date, how to move up in your career, get out of debt and weed out bad friends. Traina, who is a blogger for Hello-Giggles, addresses all of these topics using tons of pop-culture references and sample scenarios.

For the marriage crisis

After I Do, by Taylor Jenkins Reid

Heading to the self-help section looking for a book that can save your marriage is just sad, so find the answers by reading this smart new novel, instead. A couple realizes they aren't happy anymore, so they decide to take a year off of marriage — without any contact with each other. If you find yourself hating the person you're sleeping next to, this book lets you imagine what it would be like spending a year away from your spouse.

For the new parent crisis

The Kids Will Be Fine: Guilt-Free Motherhood For Thoroughly Modern Women, by Daisy Waugh

When you first become a parent, everyone wants to give you advice. New moms and dads are inundated with information about the dangers of screen time, how long you should breastfeed and have to listen to lots of unsolicited advice and unasked-for opinions. Daisy Waugh's book will make you feel a lot better. She did her research and found out it's pretty hard to scar a kid for life. It's nice to get advice that won't actually scare you.

For the friendship crisis

Nantucket Sisters, by Nancy Thayer

Sometimes it helps to get lost in someone else's friendship drama to get perspective on your own. Two childhood best friends find themselves on the brink of falling out. As kids, they spent every summer together, but grew apart. Maggie is focused on her career but wonders if she'll ever find love. Piper worries she'll never be anything more than a trophy wife.

Westworld. Anthony Hopkins, Evan Rachel Wood headline HBO series

Anthony Hopkins JOE KLAMAR/AFP

Produced by J.J. Abrams, the TV adaptation of Michael Crichton's 1973 film has now been picked up to pilot by HBO. The Oscar-winning actor who brought Hannibal Lecter to the silver screen will share the billing with the young Whatever Works star in this sci-fi drama.

For his first collaboration with HBO, the director of "Star Wars VII" is executive producing a new take on "Westworld."

Set in the future, the original film depicts a theme park where a cast of androids allows visitors to take a virtual trip to the time and place of their choosing.

For two friends and businessmen who visit the park and travel to the Far West, a fun day out turns into a nightmare when a technical malfunction allows the machines to take control. Written and directed by Michael Crichton, the 1973 film starred Yul Brynner, Richard Benjamin, James Brolin and Dick Van Patten. AFP

Agents of S.H.I.E.L.D. Lucy Lawless lands role in superhero series

Lucy Lawless AFP

According to TV Guide, the former Xena: Warrior Princess star will appear in the second season of ABC and Marvel's superhero series. No details on her role have been announced for the time being, however.

Known for her role as Xena the Warrior Princess on the eponymous TV series, which aired from 1995 to 2001, the Kiwi actress more recently played the journalist Anna Biers on Battlestar Galactica from 2005 to 2009 and Lucretia on Spartacus from 2010 to 2012.

The second season premieres Sept. 23 on ABC. AFP

Stars nix romance for Lady Mary and Tom

Downton Abbey. Characters played by Michelle Dockery and Allen Leech will be looking for love, but not with each other, when series returns

Michelle Dockery and Allen Leech of Downton Abbey say Cupid's arrow is not headed for their characters.

While talking to a TV Critics' panel Tuesday, the actors said they find it "very funny" some fans are hoping for a romantic pairing for in-laws Lady Mary Crawley and Tom Branson.

Both characters are widowed and have become confidantes in their grief.

"Their friendship has really grown," said Dockery, who reminded that at one point her aristocratic TV alter ego couldn't fathom the idea of having a chauffeur marrying her sister.

In Season 5 of the British drama, premiering Jan. 4 on PBS, that bond will strengthen as they work to preserve their country estate.

"They're after the same thing for Downton. Sustainability," said Leech. "You definitely get the idea they get together on a united front with the idea of making sure Downton is going to be around."

It's not all business though, says Dockery, who says they're also "both looking for love."

"But not with each other," quipped Leech.

Upcoming season

'Twists and turns' coming to Downton

Executive producer Gareth Neame says Downton Abbey picks up six months after Season 4 ends and promises some "substantial twists and turns."

However, popular characters played by Shirley MacLaine (Martha) and Paul Giamatti (Harold Levinson), who play the American relations, will not be back for Season 5, says Neame.

'They may be back in future seasons," he says.

Television critics were given an exclusive peek at clips from the upcoming season, and it looks like Lady Mary Crawley (Michelle Dockery) is well on her way to finding a new romance after the death of her husband.

"She's very complex. She's impulsive and makes these decisions, and once she goes through with it, she realizes it's not quite the right decision," says Dockery. "This series, she's quite impulsive. And she's embracing it. She's through the grief now. It's the new Mary, she has a bit of her bite back."

In other news, PBS President and Chief Executive Paula Kerger says that Downton will continue to be aired in the U.S. months after it has already aired in Britain.

Fiennes to play Nostradamus

According to Deadline, the English actor is set to be playing the part of famous seer Nostradamus in the eponymous TV series co-produced by Carnival Films, the production company behind "Downton Abbey."

Nostradamus will also be produced by Anonymous Content (True Detective) but it is not known yet which TV channel will broadcast the series.

Joseph Fiennes, of Shakespeare In Love and the upcoming Hercules, is a TV regular, having appeared in FlashForward and Camelot, both cancelled after the first season, and in the second season of American Horror Story. AFP

The tale of the seer apothecary

The show will follow the 16th-century French apothecary famous for his predictions as he seeks vengeance for the murder of his family.

- Affected by disturbing and dangerous visions, this self-destructive dreamer will look for the culprits and get caught up in schemes involving the Royal Court.

Zac Posen talks Project Runway and the real secret to winning it all

Fashion reality. With a new batch of designers each season, veteran judge says there is no shortage of surprises to pique his interest

Project Runway judge Zac Posen. METRO WORLD NEWS IN NYC

Project Runway may have been on for a few years now, but it's got an inherently fresh premise.

Since it's a show based around creativity, every year a new batch of designers brings all new ideas and quirks to the reality competition.

We talked to Zac Posen, judge and designer extraordinaire, about the new season and what keeps him coming back after three seasons.

On the pleasures of reality TV: "Every day is its own adventure. We have no idea what to expect, so I love having to be reactive and surprised in the moment by what we see. I love to be on a television platform that is about the creative process ... It's really the one television format that, while remaining entertaining, is actually really celebrating the process."

On the returning contestants: "When you have a returning designer, they are experienced in the situation of not only having to create in a fast time frame, but they understand who they are and how they can perfect their television persona.

"They're more seasoned players ... They've been through the ropes, and so it just ups the competition even more. They've become the go-to, in terms of advice or nurturement through the process. They definitely step up the competitive edge for the rest of the designers."

On the best challenges: My favourite challenges every season are the alternative-material challenges because, all of a sudden, you get to see how far the creativity of these designers can go.

"Because, in the time frame, very rarely are you able to finish something perfectly or the way you would do something with the actual proper time it takes to make a beautiful piece of clothing.

"Often we're surprised. There's people who are sort of magic, who have the talent of being like a magic seamstress and pattern maker, and they can zip out pieces that are totally mind-blowing fast."

On what it takes to win: "I wish that a lot of designers that I see on the show, instead of interpreting what is already out there on the street in terms of fashion, listened more inside to their own voice about what they have to say that's unique to the world.

"That becomes a key winning designer for us, when you see someone that is pushing the boundaries and showing us something new. The imagination is infinite, so it's quite a joy to watch this experience and to have fun with it, too. METRO WORLD NEWS IN NYC

Guest judges

Runway often brings in celebrity judges to spice things up. Posen says those guests bring a simple, yet important perspective like "Would I wear this?" or they bring the more in-depth "understanding the artistry of it." Expect to see such familiar faces as Elizabeth Moss, Julie Bowen, Dita Von Teese and Amanda de Cadenet stopping by to weigh in this season. Posen has nothing but kind words about his usual judging compatriots, Heidi Klum and Nina Garcia.

Rapper Nas is among the celebrities who traced their family history on Finding Your Roots. ASSOCIATED PRESS

Rap star Nas traces family tree to slavery in 1859

Finding your roots. Second season of PBS history show also traces Jessica Alba back to the Mayans and Ben Affleck to Civil War spiritualists

When Nas became the first rapper invited to trace his family tree through the PBS series Finding Your Roots, he welcomed the chance. But it hit him hard when he saw documentation of an ancestor being sold as a slave in 1859.

"First, I was enraged when I looked at the bill of sale," he said. "I was like, that guy that owned property owes me some cash. My people made him really wealthy, so maybe I should find his family and talk."

The unearthed information made him think about his ancestors' contribution to America, "and now I'm on a mission to find out more."

His family's story is among those told on season two of Finding Your Roots, hosted by Harvard scholar, author and filmmaker Henry Louis Gates Jr. and debuting Sept. 23.

The 10-part series that traces celebrities' ancestry will focus on, among others, Ben Affleck, Jessica Alba, Tina Fey, Sting, Stephen King, Billie Jean King, Derek Jeter and chef Ming Tsai.

Others taking part include Courtney Vance, Khandi Alexander and writer and actress Anna Deavere Smith.

Research on each person begins with DNA testing of a saliva sample, and eventually results in a detailed family history that Gates presents on-camera to the subject.

"I feel like Santa Claus giving people a gift," Gates said.

The results can be surprising. Alba's background was traced to the ancient Mayans, while Affleck's great-great-great-grandfather was among 19th-century spiritualists who claimed to connect Civil War dead with their grieving survivors.

Nas was asked if his newfound knowledge could influence his music. Nothing is planned, he replied, "but I think in some way it will happen on its own."

Holes in our history

• Henry Louis Gates, who hosts Finding Your Roots and has done a variety of PBS specials about African Americans and their history, recalled getting a letter from a white woman who accused him of racism for his singular focus. "I thought white people had more access to knowledge about their family tree than we did," said Gates. But he realized that's untrue and that people of every ethnicity share the same "cultural amnesia."

Thankfully this is not just a tie-in to the upcoming movie, but a fan-pleasing cartoonish brawler filled with the comic book's many characters and snappy dialogue. Yes, all you do is fight waves of villains with simple swipes, over and over, just to unlock countless upgrades, but it's fun and you do end up with a digital comic book out of it. Sure, I wish there was more depth and exploration, but I'll take it as candy. It's glossy, slick and sugary, and there's a whole big bag of it. KRIS ABEL

3 songs for the weekend

That's just weird: A parody album debuts at No. 1, there's swinging in the Commonwealth, and War on the East Coast tips the West Coast

Foil/Weird Al Yankovic

Whoever has been in charge of marketing Al's new album, Mandatory Fun, has done a masterful job (a No. 1 debut?) — and as parody records go, it's excellent. Critics love this thing. Foil is his take on Lorde's Royals.

Keep Swinging (Downtown)/ Sloan

I can't imagine a Canadian music scene without these guys. Their new album, Commonwealth (due September 9) will feature 15 tracks and songwriting contributions from all four guys. This is the first single.

War on the East Coast/New Pornographers

The new album — their sixth and due August 26 — is described by the band as "a celebration record." Interesting, considering that this song talks about Vancouver and Victoria slipping into the Pacific.

See that symbol? It means you can scan this image with your Metro News app to listen to Alan's recommended songs this week.

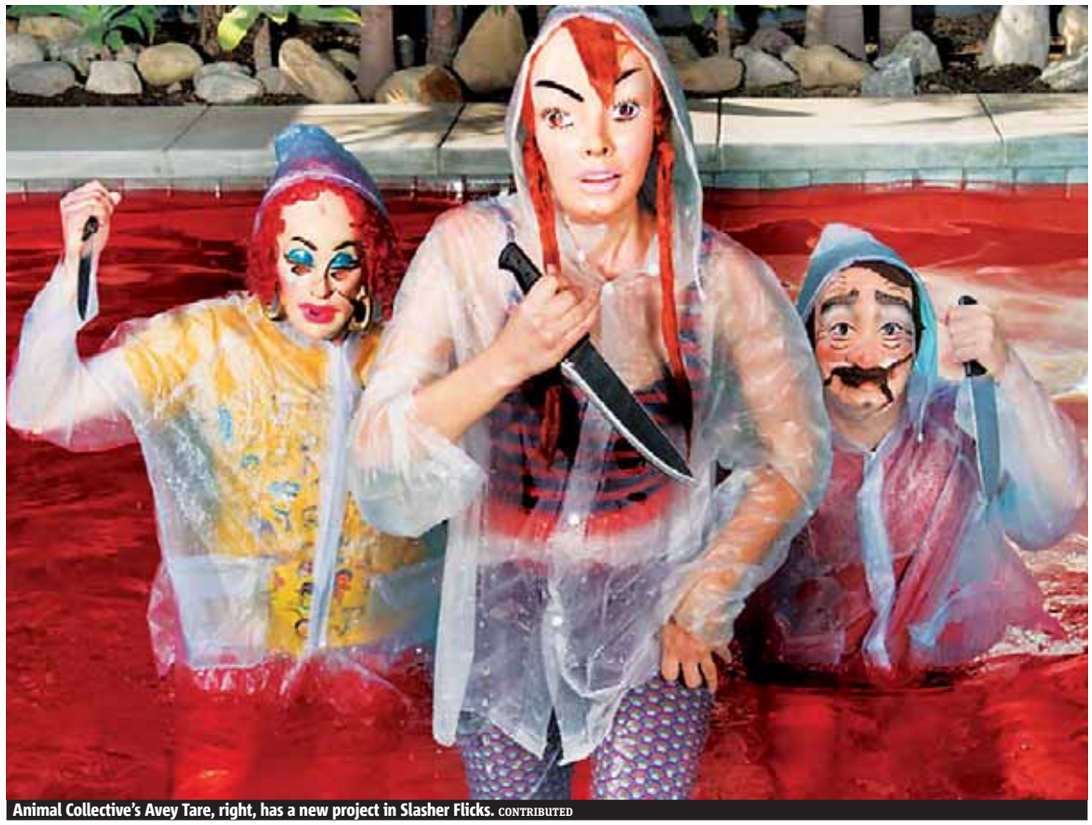
Enter the Slasher House for Avey Tare's psychedelic funhouse ride

Slasher Flicks. Animal Collective member works with different musicians to create spooky new sound

PAT HEALY
Metro World News in New York City



Animal Collective's Avey Tare, right, has a new project in Slasher Flicks. CONTRIBUTED

Believe it or not, the man in the moustachioed mask pictured here may have made the most accessible music of his career. That's David Portner on the right, rising up in a pool of blood and wielding a knife. For the past 14 years he has been known to the world as Avey Tare, one fourth of Animal Collective, arguably indie rock's most experimental success story.

But with his new project, Avey Tare's Slasher Flicks, he has touched upon something closer to pop music than ever. Unlike Animal Collective's winding, wandering circular jams, the songs on Enter The Slasher House are concise structured little bursts of psychedelia.

"Accessible, for me became almost like a dirty word," says Portner of his experience in Animal Collective, which is still very much a going concern for him. "It seems weird to think about, especially if you're basing decisions on accessibility."

As ever though, he doesn't seem to have based his decisions on accessibility, as much as the accessibility is just a product of working with different musicians: Angel Deradoorian of Dirty Projectors and Jeremy Hyman of the band Ponytail.

There is still enough weirdness with Avey Tare's Slasher Flicks that you're not likely to hear the band on the Top 40 (see aforementioned photo of the masked trio in a literal pool of blood). And the live performance involves a spooky montage of cartoons and muppets projected onto a pile of skulls. So there's that.

"We're all into visual art," says Portner of himself and his fellow Slashers. "Once I start making a piece of music, the visual element is there and it will always be attached to whatever that music is for me."

Ken Burns and Slasher Flicks

Portner says although the songs of Slasher Flicks do share a campy element with actual slasher flicks, that isn't necessarily the type of film that the band members were watching during downtime in the recording process.

- "We watched a lot more Ken Burns' Jazz, actually," says Portner.
- "But I watch a lot of horror films around the house — Angel and I live together — and I think I'm the biggest fan of that stuff more than they are."

Bing's kids recall dad's duet with Bowie

David Bowie's duet with Bing Crosby on the entertainer's 1977 Christmas television special left an indelible impression on Crosby's teenage children.

Harry, Mary and Nathaniel Crosby were on set when Bowie arrived to tape his appearance. The mash-up between the cardigan-clad singer known for White Christmas and the glam rocker who was in his Ziggy Stardust phase required some last-minute reworking of The Little Drummer Boy.

The result was a new melody and lyrics called Peace on Earth. The duet remains a holiday staple and a curiosity. Bowie was 30 and Crosby was 73 at the time. Crosby died of a heart attack a month after the taping in September 1977.

"They sat at the piano and David was a little nervous," Mary Crosby recalled. "Dad realized David was this amazing musician, and David realized Dad was an amazing musician. You could see them both collectively relax and then magic was made."

The Crosby siblings — now all in their 50s — and their 80-year-old mother, Kathryn, made a rare public appearance together Wednesday to discuss the American Masters episode, Bing Crosby Rediscovered, airing Dec. 2 on PBS.

Clip tease. Bieber flashes fans bits of new songs

Justin Bieber enticed fans on Wednesday by sharing several short clips from his recent time in the studio.

The Canadian pop star posted a total of 11 clips, seemingly from as many new songs, and captioned the first Cold waters, presumably a track name.

In each of the seconds-long videos, Bieber simply focuses the camera on a studio soundboard and moves it to the beat of the music.

The only other clue is a tweet from Bieber on the same day that read, "Great night in the studio."

The pop star has yet to reveal any details of a new album, which would be the follow-up to 2012 studio album Believe and to 2013's Journals, a compilation including tracks that were released as part of his Music Mondays campaign. AFP

Pickering, Ont. singer Shawn Mendes will release his first EP next week. ASSOCIATED PRESS FILE

Canadian teen turns Vine success into a record deal

Shawn Mendes. 15-year-old singer from Pickering, Ont. signs with Island Records and begins tour in Texas with Austin Malone.

Six seconds isn't a long time, but Vine superstar Shawn Mendes made the time count when posting cover songs on the social media platform.

The teen singer, who hails from Pickering, Ont., says he would pick the hits he would cover — and the sections of the tracks — and post them on Vine to showcase his talents and grab attention.

"You'd think, 'I don't understand why the kid has so many followers because it's only six seconds. How are you supposed to know if he's any good at six seconds?' But there's an art behind getting people to be intrigued because you only have six or six-and-a-half seconds to impress people," he said.

Mendes, who will be 16 next month, secured a following on Vine, where he had 300,000 fans awaiting his posts. Record labels caught wind of his strong social-media presence.

"Island Records was the first record label to ... acknowledge me," said Mendes, who signed with the label. "After that, quickly Republic Records, and then Atlantic Records, Sony Records and Warner Bros. It was all the labels at once. It was absolutely insane, knowing that this many record labels were interested in me."

Mendes' stardom is translating to the pop charts: His single, the ballad Life of the Party, debuted at No. 24 on the Billboard Hot 100 earlier this month, selling an impressive 148,000 tracks. He has 2.8 followers on Vine and 1.3 million on Twitter.

He will release his four-song, self-titled EP next week and will go on tour with Austin Mahone and Fifth Harmony in San Antonio.

Mendes began posting clips on Vine last year from his home, starting with a cover of Justin Bieber's As Long as You Love Me. His manager, Andrew Gertler, discovered the singer after searching for covers of Say Something.

"We knew the social following was there, but he had never sold a song before," Gertler said. "Coming to New York and seeing that girls were showing up to his hotel and seeing that these numbers online were translating to physical people was when we were kind of like, 'OK, this is getting serious.'"

Zoe Saldana ALL PHOTOS: GETTY IMAGES

Is she or isn't she? Saldana keeps baby rumour mill spinning

Apparently those rumours about Guardians of the Galaxy star Zoe Saldana expecting a baby are true, but she won't confirm them just yet. And it looks like some publications have been getting mixed signals about exactly when that will be, as the Hollywood Reporter posted then promptly deleted a story claiming a rep for Saldana had confirmed the pregnancy. But another source tells Us Weekly that Saldana and husband Marco Perego are thrilled about the impending arrival.

Robin Thicke

Family home for sale after Robin's pitch to woo Paula back falls flat

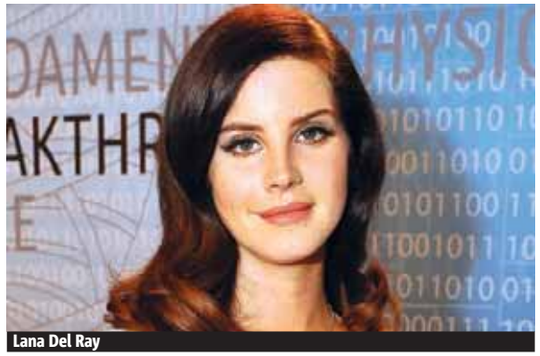
It looks like Robin Thicke's plan to use his latest album, Paula, as a blatant attempt to woo back estranged wife Paula Patton didn't quite work out for the Canadian crooner, as Variety reports that the couple's $3 million Los Angeles home is officially on the market. The 3,100-square-foot, three-bedroom Hollywood Hills mansion was purchased by Robin's dad, Alan Thicke, back in 1990 for $910,000 and signed over to the younger Thicke in 2005 when he married Patton. No word on whether any proceeds from the sale will go back to Alan.

The Word

Bieber pops a wheelie puzzling stunt at Disneyland

NED EHRBAR
Metro World News in Hollywood

Justin Bieber had fans scratching their heads during a recent trip to Disneyland when he was seen being pushed around in a wheelchair — leading some to speculate he was looking to cut lines at the more popular rides. For once, Bieber's people and I are on the same page because that's just plain ridiculous. As they explained to TMZ, he wouldn't need to worry about lines because Disney staff were already on hand to help him cut the lines anyway like any normal famous person. The wheelchair, they say, was because Bieber was nursing a basketball injury, though he was seen the day before and after in L.A. carrying his own weight just fine. But they go too far with their explanation of the lad's odd behaviour by saying he "only sat in the wheelchair for a few moments," since fan photos and videos from throughout the day tell a different story. It's OK, Justin. Sometimes I don't feel like walking when I'm getting a free, all-access, line-hopping tour of the Happiest Place on Earth either. I understand. Walking's hard, man.



Lana Del Ray

Lana's pet peeve? Not being able to sleep her way to a record deal

Lana Del Rey is causing a stir again, claiming her controversial new song F—ed My Way to the Top is at least partially true. "You know, I have slept with a lot of guys in the industry. But none of them helped me get my record deals. Which is annoying," she tells Complex magazine. Also annoying? How much people criticize her, though with this new album she insists she's more prepared than last time. "That gold and platinum stuff, it doesn't mean as much if you're walking down the street and you can hear people saying things about you. That doesn't even out," she says. "The good thing about catching so much grief from critics is that you literally do not f—ing care. It put me in a mind frame where I expect things not to go right, because they generally don't." You … go, girl?

Barbecue classic gets a saucy makeover

Flank Steak with Chimichurri Sauce.

Your marinade choice can make all the difference to flavour

RICARDO COOKS
Chef Ricardo
Ricardo Magazine

Basic steaks aren't too exotic, but that doesn't mean they can't impress. For me, what separates the amateurs from the pros is little extras like a bright sauce or unexpected heat.

With this classic-with-a-twist, you're sure to become the new neighbourhood barbecue master.

Chimichurri

1. In a bowl, combine all the ingredients. Keep 1 cup (250 ml) in the refrigerator until serving.

Steaks

1. In a glass dish or sealable plastic bag, cover the flank steaks with the remaining Chimichurri sauce. Cover the dish or seal the bag and refrigerate for 12 to 24 hours.

Ingredients

Chimichurri
- 1/4 cup (60 ml) finely chopped shallots
- 1/4 cup (60 ml) each fresh oregano, cilantro, chopped
- 2 tbsp (30 ml) chopped parsley
- 1 tbsp (15 ml) each fresh thyme and garlic, chopped
- 1 tbsp (15 ml) crushed red pepper flakes, or to taste
- 1/4 cup (60 ml) red wine vinegar
- 1 1/2 cups (375 ml) olive oil

Steaks
- 2 lb (1 kg) flank steak
- 1 tsp (5 ml) salt
- 1 tsp (5 ml) ground pepper

2. Preheat the grill, setting the burners on high. Oil the grate.

3. Remove steaks from marinade and rub with salt, pepper.

4. Grill steaks for about 5 minutes on each side depending on their size or until the desired doneness. Set aside on a plate and let rest for 5 minutes.

5. Slice thinly against the grain of the meat and drizzle with the reserved sauce. Serve with rice and slices of avocado drizzled with lime juice. Season with salt and pepper. Spicy Triple Burgers heat it up

1. Seasoning: In a bowl, combine all seasoning ingredients. Set aside.

2. Spicy Mayo: In a bowl, combine all mayo ingredients. Refrigerate.

3. Preheat grill, setting burners to high. Oil grate. Shape beef into 12 very thin patties.

4. Grill bacon until crisp. Grill burgers about 3 minutes per side or until meat is thoroughly cooked. Sprinkle with seasoning. One minute before the end of cooking, place cheese slices on four patties. Toast buns.

5. Assembly: Spread mayo sauce on buns. Place meat topped with cheese on bottom buns. Add plain patties and garnish with tomatoes. Add last patties. Layer with slices of bacon and lettuce. Cover with top buns. RICARDO

While I'm willing to pour a glass of anything no matter the weather, most red wine doesn't scream "thirst-quenching" at me after an hour of lawn mowing.

Though beer is a back deck staple, there are plenty of wines that can share that space.

My first choice this time of year is rosé. I love its fresh, berry goodness and bright pink colours, along with its ability to match with most food.

If you think rosé is a summertime cliché (and it isn't), look to countries where hot temperatures are more than seasonal — they're a way of life.

Portugal is a great example. It may be famous for its thick fortified wines, but come the warmer months everyone reaches for a glass of white Vinho Verde — a zippy wine with a touch of effervescence.

Styles vary and a wide variety is carried across Canada. Quinta da Aveleda's 2012 Vinho Verde ($9.95 - $12.99) combines citrus, lime and soft, tropical fruit with a light fizz. Perfect as an aperitif or with salads and light seafood dishes. PRICES REFLECT THE RANGE ACROSS THE COUNTRY. SOME PRODUCTS MAY NOT BE AVAILABLE IN ALL PROVINCES.

Theatre Calgary

Shakespeare in the Park

The third season of Shakespeare By The Bow begins on June 25 and this year the troupe will be presenting a modern and amusing version of The Comedy Of Errors. The story follows the outcome of twins separated at birth only to wind up living in the same city. The audience will love the chaos and confusion that follows as people mistake their identities. All the theatrical fun will take place in Prince's Island Park. You can check the Theatre Calgary site for show times. theatrecalgary.com

Banff Arts Festival

The Banff Arts Festival is now underway with fun film screenings, readings and exhibitions to check out all summer. On Saturday, July 26th, Coeur de Pirate will be playing at the Shaw Amphitheatre; if you buy one ticket you receive the second one for free. Coeur de Pirate is the award-winning solo act featuring French-Canadian pop darling Beatrice Martin. She's got it all: the voice, the talent and over 25 million views on YouTube. Show begins at 6:30 p.m. banffcentre.ca

Block KITCHEN+BAR

Block Kitchen

If you're going to be in Banff for the Arts Festival, then you might want to put Block Kitchen and Bar on your radar. Located on the main drag of Banff Avenue, Block has just opened up and offers a great selection of cold beverage and some tasty tapas. If you're making a night of it, this hot spot is conveniently close to all the other great venues in town and they serve food until 1 a.m. The Diablo sausages are worth ordering. Yum! banffblock.com

SHIP & ANCHOR

Punk Rock Bingo

Hurray for summertime and being able to spend a bit of quality indulgence outside for a change. Enjoying a few drinks and snacks on the sunny south-facing Ship and Anchor patio followed by a game of Punk Rock Bingo on Tuesday night is probably one of the best ways to celebrate this time of year. You'll thank yourself on Wednesday. shipandanchor.com

FEST

X-Fest Is Coming!

This is your heads-up to buy tickets to this year's X-Fest, which might arguably have the best line up yet. Taking place in Calgary over the August long weekend (August 30 and 31), the 2014 lineup has some pretty big acts like Jack White, Arctic Monkeys, Foster The People, The Smalls and Death Cab For Cutie. If you're looking for a new act to see, then we highly recommend July Talk. This is an all ages event at Fort Calgary, but there will be a beer garden on premise. Tickets can be purchased at: xfestcalgary.com

Avenue Q

You have to love a theatre production that is rated R and includes puppets. This month, Stage West is showcasing a play that is best described as sex, drugs and muppets for your viewing pleasure. Avenue Q takes place on a rundown street in New York and focuses around the characters that live on the block. You have until August 31st to catch one of the most talked about productions in town. Tickets are available on the website: stagewestcalgary.com

Stampeders left as CFL's only undefeated team

Horse power flattens Eskimos. Calgary 4-0 to begin season, Bo Levi Mitchell now 7-0 as a starting QB

The Stampeders' Jock Sanders tackles the Eskimos' John White in Edmonton on Thursday. JASON FRANSON/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Rene Paredes nailed four field goals as the Calgary Stampeders became the sole remaining undefeated team in the Canadian Football League with a 26-22 victory over the Edmonton Eskimos on Thursday.

The Stampeders improved to 4-0 on the season while quarterback Bo Levi Mitchell improved to 7-0 as a CFL starter, tying former Stampeder Jeff Garcia's league record for best start.

The Eskimos dropped to 4-1 on the year, missing out on a chance to surpass the total number of wins they had in a disappointing 4-14 campaign in 2013.

Edmonton's defence was forced to come up big early as Eskimos' punt returner Jamal Miles coughed up the ball just over a minute into the game on his own 27-yard line. That was as close as Calgary got, however, as the Stampeders were held to a 36-yard Paredes field goal.

The Eskimos came right back on their next possession with a 31-yard Grant Shaw field goal to tie it 3-3.

Calgary came up with another big special teams play with six minutes remaining in the first quarter as Keenan MacDougall blocked a Shaw punt deep in the Edmonton zone and was able to pick it up and ramble the remaining six yards into the end zone to put the Stampeders up 10-3.

Pat White replaced Mike Reilly at quarterback to start the second quarter and instantly drew a pass interference call on an end-zone pass. He would then take it in from the one-yard line to knot the game back up. It was White's first CFL touchdown.

The defensive battle continued as Fred Bennett picked off a Reilly pass at the Edmonton 45, eventually leading to a 36-yard Paredes field goal.

The Eskimos responded with a 40-yarder from Shaw.

Edmonton tried a fake punt with 24 seconds remaining as defensive back Aaron Grymes took off with the ball from his own end zone. It was a costly risk, however, as he was stopped just short of the first down, leading to a 16-yard touchdown pass from Mitchell to Jeff Fuller and a 20-13 Calgary lead at the half.

The Eskimos atoned for the miscue 6-1/2 minutes into the third quarter, as they stopped the Stamps on a third-down gamble at the Calgary 32-yard line. On the next play, Reilly was able to pass to a wide-open Shamawd Chambers for the touchdown to tie it once again.

Calgary regained the lead in the pouring rain with just over a minute remaining in the third frame on a 29-yard Paredes field goal and then benefited from a bevy of Edmonton penalties to make it 26-20 six minutes into the fourth quarter on a 30-yarder from their kicker.

Stro sniffs no-no vs. Sox

MLB. Rookie right-hander twirls another gem as Blue Jays take series finale vs. Boston

Toronto Blue Jays' manager John Gibbons couldn't help but worry just a little. Marcus Stroman had a no-hitter alive through six innings, but the prized 23-year-old prospect was up to 91 pitches in a game the Blue Jays were well on their way to winning.

Stroman's third pitch of the seventh inning and 94th of Thursday afternoon hit Shane Victorino's bat and landed in centre field for a bloop single. The sellout crowd of 46,683 applauded, while Gibbons could take a deep breath knowing he wouldn't have to make the impossible decision on whether or not to keep the young pitcher in the game.

Stroman ended up throwing seven innings of one-hit ball in an 8-0 victory over the Red Sox.

"I can't say that I'm glad he gave up a hit," Gibbons said, trailing off. "If this keeps going, you've got a young kid, you're trying to win a division and you keep throwing him out there over and over. I don't know if relieved is the word, but it didn't hurt. Sorry, Stro."

Stroman allowed just one hit over seven innings to give the Blue Jays (54-49) not only an important win, but optimism about the future.

He improved to 6-2 with a 3.21 earned-run average, admittedly surpassing his own expectations in his rookie year.

"It's definitely been a ride so far," Stroman said. "But I'm not surprised. It's just all the hard work that goes into it and going out there having your game plan and attacking hitters. That's the biggest thing ... just attacking hitters and getting ahead in the count."

The Blue Jays' bats staked Stroman to a significant lead by beating up on Boston's Rubby De La Rosa (3-3), who gave up six earned runs on nine hits in four-plus innings. First-baseman Juan Francisco (3-for-4 with 4 RBI) finished a double short of the cycle, and left-fielder Melky Cabrera drove in two more runs. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Petrovic, Putnam take lead after first round in Montreal

Canadian Open.
Putnam has had top-35 finishes in his last three outings

Richmond Hill, Ont., native Taylor Pendrith is a shot back of the lead after Round 1 at the Canadian Open. PAUL CHIASSON/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Michael Putnam and Tim Petrovic mastered the afternoon winds to shoot six-under-par 64s and take a share of the first-round lead at the $5.7 million RBC Canadian Open on Thursday.

But the surprise of the day was big-hitting amateur Taylor Pendrith of Richmond Hill, Ont., who shot five-under 65 for a share of third place with Kyle Stanley.

Putnam and Petrovic played bogey-free golf at the 7,153-yard par-70 Blue Course at Royal Montreal on a near perfect day for scoring, with sunny weather and soft greens from heavy rains the previous day.

A gust wind came in for those with afternoon starts, but it didn't stop Putnam or Petrovic from shooting the low scores, which set the course record for an opening round.

"It was tough ball-striking, but somehow I was able to keep it in the fairway and take advantage of the soft greens to hit a couple of shots close and make a couple of five-to-ten-foot putts," said Putnam.

Horoscopes by Sally Brompton

♈ Aries
March 21 - April 20
Your head may be full of ideas but not every one of them is practical, so don't get carried away. Tomorrow's new moon indicates great things, but you must take your time and think.

♉ Taurus
April 21 - May 21
Someone you like may say something hurtful about you today, but you must not let your friendship suffer. You are probably being a bit too sensitive for your own good.

♊ Gemini
May 22 - June 21
You have nothing to prove and everything to look forward to. Even if you don't quite believe it now you will over the weekend.

♋ Cancer
June 22 - July 23
If someone who doesn't normally pay you attention tells you what a great person you are, it's a sign they are after something. That something could be your approval.

♌ Leo
July 24 - Aug. 23
You may be inclined to believe that your recent run of good fortune will come to an end but nothing could be further from the truth. If anything your days will keep getting better.

♍ Virgo
Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
You may see enemies in every nook and cranny but most of them exist in your imagination only, so get a grip and start getting important things done.

♎ Libra
Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
You have a tendency to believe in yourself to such a degree that you think nothing can go wrong. You also need to recognize everyone has limits.

♏ Scorpio
Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
It's not like you to let others have the last word but it will pay you to do so today. Even if you can quite easily prove someone wrong, don't. They will remember it and harbour thoughts of revenge.

♐ Sagittarius
Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
Others will go out of their way to pick holes in your arguments over the next 24 hours. Ignore them. Having said that, be aware there may be something you have overlooked.

♑ Capricorn
Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
Resist the temptation to look at the world as if everything that happens is a disaster. Focus only on good news today and soon life will look grand again.

♒ Aquarius
Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
Mercury, planet of trickery, could mislead you into thinking you've got the best of a deal when others will profit more than you. Check the small print.

♓ Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
The more someone tries to coerce you into doing something you are not certain is in your best interests, the more you must resist.

GOD HAS CREATED ENOUGH ROOM FOR US
God goes before His people to make room for them. The Lord was with Joseph and favoured him in the house of Potiphar, in the prison and even in Pharaoh's palace. Trust God as He fantastically prepares for you for it is written, "The Lord himself will lead you and be with you. He will not fail you or abandon you, so do not lose courage or be afraid".
